

Wikipedia Article Microsite - Initial Build Discussion Notes

What's working

- Overall color palette with the images and the green outline/text is working well!
- I like the little descriptions above each button at the bottom of the pages, which helps to add context without making the button itself too busy
- I love the typefaces!
 - They pair really well, and the more simple/clean typeface works well for the body text

Areas for Improvement / Next Steps

- Resolution of the main image of the home page – it looks slightly pixelated/fuzzy at full desktop
- Learn More button can be a bit higher contrast?
- Can consider having the text change when hovering over the buttons to be more interactive
- For the mobile layout
 - Figure out how to condense the navigation bar/maybe consider a hamburger menu button
 - Have the images and text stack in a way that makes sense/doesn't feel too crowded, particularly for the home page, where in the desktop layout they are more integrated together
- Content
 - Could add room for brief descriptions of each character underneath their name
 - A bit more ambitious, but could somehow make them clickable to reveal the description info? Or use hover effects?
 - Similar approach for setting and media that I described for characters to make the website feel cohesive throughout
